Thank you for participating in the <COLLABORATOR study name> study which will <brief description of the BHR Collaboration goals>. Now, we’d like you to join the Brain Health Registry (BHR) online, which will impact brain health research even more.

The BHR is a free internet study led by researcher scientists at the University of California, San Francisco. If you choose to join, you will be asked to answer questions about yourself and take online brain tests, which are like computer games. Participation is entirely online. All information entered in the Brain Health Registry is secure and privacy is protected.

As a BHR participant, you'll have the option to learn about additional research opportunities, such as clinical trials. And as a participant in both <brief description of the BHR Collaboration goals> and BHR, you have the unique opportunity to connect your data from both studies, which will help us learn more about changes in brain health over time.
